

Author Information

Dan Phillips

Dan Phillips has been studying the Bible in Hebrew and Greek since the early 1970s—yet he still has his feet on the ground. Dan has studied in four Biblical institutions and taught in five, and has served as pastor in four churches. Dan has also worked as a cook, a civil investigator, and in IT Support. He knows both sides of the pulpit and lectern.

Dan’s decades-long search for effective ways to communicate the Word of God broadly led to the authoring of tracts, pamphlets, syllabi, magazine articles, and pieces in daily newspapers. Dan also did Bible teaching on local TV and radio.

In addition to enjoying an ongoing conference and pulpit ministry, Dan is known internationally through the Pyromaniacs blog with Phil Johnson and Frank Turk (<http://teampyro.blogspot.com>), and on his own Biblical Christianity blog (<http://bibchr.blogspot.com>). Readers include pastors, authors, church workers, adults and teens of varied backgrounds. They appreciate Dan's ability to take deeply Biblical concepts, break them down, and present them broadly in an edgy, arresting manner, sprinkled with a touch of humor.

In The World-Tilting Gospel, Dan’s years of Biblical studies combine with his knack for connecting with diverse audiences. When readers finish their journey, they will have a deeper grasp of the Biblical teaching on the nature of God and of man, creation, sin, the plan of redemption, the person and work of Christ, and the foundational truths of Christian life—all delivered in a conversational tone.

The World-Tilting Gospel grew out of Dan’s awareness that Christians do not see the Gospel in its fullness, because they do not understand it within a whole-Bible context. Our worldview must start as the Bible does, with Genesis 1:1 rather than John 3:16. A real grasp of the person and work of Christ is only possible when we are gripped by this whole-Bible worldview. Then we can be freed in heart and mind, and become world-tilters instead of world-tilted.

Married for twenty-one years to his amazing wife Valerie, father of four, “cat-herd” to a varying number, Dan brings to this book a unique combination of deeply-Biblical study, urgency, and down-to-earth reality.

The World-Tilting Gospel (978-0-8254-3908-7, $17.99p) by Dan Phillips is published by Kregel Publications.

