Part 1: What Thirty-five Years Has Taught Me

Part 2: Letters

Letter One

Matt's Struggle: God may have created the world, but circumstantial evidence proves he doesn't know how to run it.

Letter Two

Kellie's Struggle: How can I trust a book that was written over two thousand years ago? Besides that, the Bible could win a prize for being one of the most boring books ever written.

Letter Three

Lindsey's Struggle: Some of the things that God has done are gross or just plain bizarre. Why was bloodshed so necessary?

Letter Four

Chuck's Struggle: I've discovered that those who do wrong prosper, and those who do right suffer. Because of this, I'd rather be a bad guy.

Letter Five

Alex's Struggle: Please bear with me. I take all this religion stuff very seriously and plan to become a Christian, but first I want to have some fun in life.

Letter Six

Nathan's Struggle: I've listened to many people talk about God, but they all have different opinions about how a person comes to him. Why?

Letter Seven

Greg's Struggle: Jesus Christ was not the only one who claimed to be God. Isn't it possible that he was really just some guy on an ego trip?

Letter Eight

Brian's Struggle: If God is as loving as he claims to be, how in the world can he send anyone to hell?

Letter Nine

Kristie's Struggle: Church might excite God, but it doesn't excite me. I just don't fit in.

Letter Ten

Kevin's Struggle: A lot has happened since I first came to God but something is still missing. Please help me understand what it is.

Letter Eleven

Bruce's Struggle: Why would a happy person need Jesus?

Letter Twelve

Diana's Struggle: If God is so great, why are his people so awful?

Letter Thirteen

Ricardo's Struggle: I asked God to prove his existence to me by helping me with my problems. I'm still waiting for him to do so.

Letter Fourteen

Ann's Struggle: My husband, Brent, died last year. If I come to Christ, I will have to accept the fact that Brent is in hell. Admitting that is extremely difficult.

Letter Fifteen

Claire's Struggle: Okay, you're getting through to me. But I'm scared to death that if I trust Christ, he'll want me to be a missionary in Africa. I'm just not cut out for that.
